

to come to me, shouldn't I spit on them?

SENATOR BEUTLER: One minute, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Shouldn't I laugh at them? But I don't do it. So after you go to Washington and recharge your batteries, all I ask is that you come back here and help me to help yours.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Schmit, do you wish to close on the resolution?

SENATOR SCHMIT: Mr. President and members of the body, it is always interesting how much diversity of opinion you can develop over a resolution which at one point in time seemed to be almost unanimous in its support. I recognize that there are some changes in this amendment, this resolution, which some people might not appreciate. I want to point out several things. First of all, there are people everyday who travel to Washington at their own expense to communicate with their delegation leaders, with their other representatives back there about the problems which affect not only agriculture but business and industry, education, the poor, the handicapped, et cetera. I would expect that there will be some people who will travel back to Washington in this instance regardless of what we do here today. There is no way this body can deny to an individual who chooses to use his own resources the right to travel on an airplane, a public conveyance, to this nation's capital, and I am sure that might take place. What I did want to do is to give it some semblance of organization to avoid the problem that Senator Vickers outlines and does so very well. I want to point out also that the adoption of this resolution with or without the amendments which I have proposed no way binds this body, but it is a reflection of the opinion of the body as to whether or not there might be some benefit in having additional individuals involved. I would just like to say that I have as much respect for this Legislature as any member of it. I have been a member of it for almost as long as anyone else except Senator Warner. But that does not preclude the fact that there may be some good ideas that might come from other individuals. We have a tendency to be so enraptured with our own points of views sometimes that we perhaps close out some other solutions or suggestions that might be helpful to us. I would hope that the body would pass the resolution recognizing it is not binding in
